

CONNECTIVITY PROJECT

A documentary series on the ripple effects of our actions in an interconnected world.

How many times have you wondered, “Does what I do make a difference in the world?” Connectivity Project explores this ever-present question, in a visually stunning series of 15 minute films.

Featuring interviews with tribal elders, noted scientists and naturalists, and environmental activists, the series weaves connections between science, culture and spirituality. We unpack the butterfly effect metaphor, developing the awareness that what we each do makes a difference. Together, we discover that small actions can indeed have large impacts.

With inspirational true stories about the ripple effects of individuals, Connectivity Project evokes a sense of belonging to something much greater than ourselves, and thus our own responsibility. Whether by the choices we make, how we spend our money, what we vote for, or how we treat each other, would we act differently if we saw the world differently?

“The films made my students realize how we are in a small or great way all connected.”
- M. Hatfield, Teacher, George Fox University

“It’s so well done - and inspiring.”
- Jon Sawyer, Pulitzer Center Executive Director

“You never know how a single thing you do will affect others in the grand scheme of things. It causes me to think more before I act.”
- Rob Les, 10th grade student, Jesuit HS

“This is probably one of the most important projects on earth at this time. Its brilliance lies in its simplicity and its necessity... you have hit the core of not just the problem but of where we should all be focusing our attention.”

Jean Houston - philosopher, scholar, and founder of the human potential movement
